Class _____ No. _____ Name _____

① Just after midnight on November 5, 1605, guards with lanterns walked into a dark room under Parliament in London. There, they found a man next to a big pile of wood. Under the wood were 36 barrels of gunpowder. The man's name was Guy Fawkes.

② Fawkes was part of a secret group of 13 men.

They were angry because Catholics were not treated fairly in England. Their plan was to blow up Parliament when King James the First was inside. But someone sent a letter to a lord and warned him to stay away. The king's men searched the building, and the plan failed.

⑤ It is a strange holiday when you think about it. People remember a plan that never happened, and they use gunpowder to do it. Every year, children still learn an old rhyme that begins with these famous words. Remember, remember the fifth of November.
