- Riku Those flowers are beautiful, Emily. Are they for a party?
- Emily No, they're for Mum. Tomorrow is Mothering Sunday.
- Riku Mothering Sunday? You mean Mother's Day? But it's March!
- Emily Yes, in Britain it's in March. When is it in Japan?
- Riku The second Sunday in May, the same as in America.
- Emily Ours is older, I think. It started in churches hundreds of years ago.
- Riku Really? How did it start?
- Emily People went back to their mother church. Young workers got a day off to visit their families.
- Riku That's nice. In Japan, we usually give red carnations.
- Emily Some people here give carnations, too. My little brother is making a card.
- Riku Maybe I should send a message to my mom in Japan.
- Emily Good idea! Then you can celebrate twice this year.
