Listen here

- Kenta Lucía, why is there a cup of twelve grapes in front of me?
- Lucía It's for midnight! We eat one grape with each bell from the clock in Puerta del Sol.
- Kenta Twelve grapes with twelve bells? That sounds easy.
- Lucía It isn't! The bells are fast. My mouth is always full at the end.
- Kenta Ha ha. Why twelve?
- Lucía One grape is one month. If you finish them all, you'll be lucky all year.
- Kenta I read that grape farmers started it to sell more grapes. Is that true?
- Lucía Only partly. Farmers made it popular in 1909, but newspapers wrote about it before that.
- Kenta So it's older than people think. Cool.
- Lucía And my cousins in the Canary Islands eat their grapes one hour after us!
- Kenta Oh, because of the time difference?
- Lucía Exactly. Do you have something like this in Japan?
- Kenta We listen to temple bells. They ring 108 times, but we don't eat anything.
- Lucía Good! 108 grapes would be too many. Quick, it's almost time!
