Listen here

- Lucas Yui, look at those kids! Why are they wearing kimono?
- Yui It's Shichi-Go-San. It's a festival for children aged three, five, and seven.
- Lucas Why those numbers?
- Yui Long ago, there was a different ceremony for each age. Odd numbers are also lucky in East Asia.
- Lucas Oh, that's neat. What are the long bags they're carrying?
- Yui That's chitose-ame. It means thousand-year candy.
- Lucas Thousand-year candy? Is it really old?
- Yui No, ha ha! It's a wish for a long life. That's why there's a crane and a turtle on the bag.
- Lucas I see. Is today a holiday?
- Yui No. The day is November 15, but most families come on a weekend.
- Lucas We don't have this in Brazil, but some girls have a big party at fifteen.
- Yui Oh, like a quinceanera? I've seen that in a movie!
- Lucas Yes, but in Portuguese we call it festa de quinze anos.
- Yui Cool! Both festivals say the same thing. Thank you for growing up!
