❶ In the fall of 1621, a small English village in North America held a harvest party. About 50 English settlers were there. Then about 90 Wampanoag men arrived with their leader, Ousamequin. They stayed for three days, and they brought five deer for the meal.

❷ Both groups had a hard story behind them.

The English came on a ship called the Mayflower in 1620. Their first winter was terrible, and about half of them died. A few years earlier, a terrible sickness had killed many Wampanoag people. So the two groups made an agreement to protect each other.

❺ Not everyone remembers the day in the same way. For many Native Americans, it is also a time to think about what their people lost. Since 1970, some of them have met in Plymouth on Thanksgiving Day for a National Day of Mourning. At the Thanksgiving table, there is more than one story to tell.
