- Lucas Hana, why are there dumplings by the window?
- Hana They're for the moon. Tonight is Jugoya, the night of moon viewing.
- Lucas For the moon? That's so cute. What's the tall grass?
- Hana It's called susuki. Some people say it looks like rice plants.
- Lucas Is the moon full tonight?
- Hana Almost! The real full moon is the day after tomorrow.
- Lucas Really? I thought Jugoya was always a full moon.
- Hana Many Japanese people think so too. Look, the moon is coming up!
- Lucas Wow, it's huge. In Brazil, some people see Saint George on the moon.
- Hana Interesting! In Japan, we see a rabbit making rice cakes.
- Lucas A rabbit? Let me see. Oh, I think I can see its ears!
- Hana Now let's eat the dumplings. The moon has had enough time to enjoy them.
